

Five Minutes to a Working Journal

Your ebook came with the free PIP:Insight Trade Journal (pip-insight.co.uk/journal — software, not a spreadsheet, and your data never leaves your device). Here's the five-step routine that makes it actually change your trading.

1 Log the trade the moment it closes

Pair, direction, planned or unplanned, R result, and how you felt. Thirty seconds. The habit is the product.

2 Tag the setup by name

"London open pullback", "NY reversal" — whatever yours are. The journal prices each setup separately, and that's where the truth lives.

3 Watch the Discipline Score, not the P&L

The 0-100 dial weighs planned-trade share, emotional control, your reaction after losses, overtrading and risk consistency. Green weeks on the dial come before green months on the account.

4 Read your Playbook monthly

THE EDGE tag = your best setup by expectancy: do more of it. THE LEAK = your worst: cut it or fix it. Most traders never learn which is which.

5 Check the calendar heatmap after a red day

One red square is a lesson bought. Three in a row is a pattern — and the journal will show you what the pattern is.

Why we built it free: most traders don't lose to the market — they lose to themselves, unrecorded. A journal makes the losing visible, and visible things get fixed. The optional Pro layer (£9.99/mo) adds an AI analyst that reads your journal and tells you what it sees; the journal itself is free forever.
